Palestra sobre a relação entre Direito, teatro e literatura marca programação científica de 60 anos da Amapi

10 de agosto de 2019

Magistrados, advogados e estudantes lotaram o auditório da Associação dos Magistrados Piaulenses, na noite dessa sexta-feira (9), para prestigiar a palestra "Inutilidades necessárias: o que as peças de Shakespeare e as obras de Machado de Assis nos ensinam sobre a Justiça", proferida pelo professor e advogado Plauto Cardoso. O evento, realizado em parceria com a Escola Superior de Magistratura de Estado do Piauí (Esmaepi), integra a programação científica de 60 anos da Amapi.

Durante a palestra, o professor Plauto Cardoso colocou em debate algumas reflexões jurídicas que permeiam obras dos escritores Machado de Assis e William Shakespeare, trazendo casos concretos presentes em livros, como "O Alienista", e em peças teatrais, como "O Mercador de Veneza". "Em síntese, é uma palestra que coloca em discussão a importância da humanidade do Direito. A única coisa que pode nos salvar da barbárie é a arte, é a educação", afirma Plauto Cardoso, que também é membro honorário da Amapi.
